ORDER

Plaintiff's Motion to Remand (ECF No. 39)

22 I. INTRODUCTION

23 Before this Court comes Plaintiff / Counterdefendant Hollyvale Rental Holdings, LLC 24 ("Hollyvale")'s Motion to Remand (ECF No. 39). For the reasons stated below, the Motion to 25 Remand is DENIED.
26

27 II. BACKGROUND

28 On November 22, 2016, Hollyvale filed a Complaint in the Eighth Judicial District Court

1 of Clark County, Nevada. (ECF No 1-2). Hollyvale filed a First Amended Complaint in the state
2 court on December 9, 2016. (ECF No. 1-5). Hollyvale brought the following causes of action: (1)
3 quiet title, against all Defendants; (2) declaratory relief, against all Defendants; and (3) injunctive 4 relief, against Federal National Mortgage Association and Quality Loan Service Corporation.
5 Defendant Federal National Mortgage Association (“Fannie Mae”) filed a Petition for Removal on 6 December 14, 2016. (ECF No. 1). Fannie Mae asserted in the Petition: “The ground for this 7 removal is federal question jurisdiction over claims brought against Fannie Mae. Fannie Mae owns 8 the loan secured by the first Deed of Trust recorded against the subject property and is the 9 beneficiary of record of the Deed of Trust. Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 1331, ‘[t]he district courts shall 10 have original jurisdiction of all civil actions arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the 11 United States.’ Fannie Mae’s federal corporate charter confers federal question jurisdiction over 12 claims brought against Fannie Mae. Lightfoot v. Cendant Mortg. Corp., 769 F.3d 681 (9th Cir.
13 2014).”

14 On January 3, 2017, Fannie Mae filed an Answer and Counterclaim. (ECF No. 6). In the 15 Counterclaim, Fannie Mae asserted the following causes of action: (1) declaratory relief under 12 16 U.S.C. § 4617(j)(3); (2) quiet title under 12 U.S.C. § 4617(j)(3); (3) declaratory relief under the 17 Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments; (4) quiet title under the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments; (5) 18 permanent and preliminary injunction; and (6) unjust enrichment. Hollyvale filed an Answer to 19 the Counterclaim on January 12, 2017. (ECF No. 7).

20 On August 21, 2017, Hollyvale filed the instant Motion to Remand. (ECF No. 39). Fannie 21 Mae filed its Response on September 5, 2017. (ECF No. 43). Hollyvale filed its Reply on 22 September 8, 2017. (ECF No. 44). On August 23, 2017, the Court entered a minute order staying 23 the case pending a decision on a question certified to the Nevada Supreme Court, and setting a 24 hearing on the Motion to Remand. (ECF No. 41). Also on August 23, Hollyvale filed its Second 25 Amended Complaint, adding Red Rock Financial Services and Villas at Terra Linda Homeowners 26 Association as Defendants. (ECF No. 42). On October 6, 2017, the Court held a hearing on the 27 matter and took the motion under submission. (ECF No. 55).

III. LEGAL STANDARD

A. Removal Jurisdiction

28 U.S.C. § 1441(a) grants federal district courts jurisdiction over state court actions that originally could have been brought in federal court. “Removal and subject matter jurisdiction statutes are strictly construed, and a defendant seeking removal has the burden to establish that removal is proper and any doubt is resolved against removability.” Hawaii ex rel. Louie v. HSBC Bank Nevada, N.A., 761 F.3d 1027, 1034 (9th Cir. 2014) (citation and quotation marks omitted).

B. Federal Question Jurisdiction

A district court has “original jurisdiction of all civil actions arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States.” 28 U.S.C. § 1331. An action “arises under” federal law when “federal law creates the cause of action.” Merrell Dow Pharm. Inc. v. Thompson, 478 U.S. 804, 808 (1986). But even where a claim finds its origins in state rather than federal law, the Supreme Court has identified a “special and small category” of cases in which federal question jurisdiction still exists. Empire Healthchoice Assurance, Inc., v. McVeigh, 547 U.S. 677, 699 (2006). Federal jurisdiction over a state law claim may lie if a federal issue is: (1) necessarily raised, (2) actually disputed, (3) substantial, and (4) capable of resolution in federal court without disrupting the federal-state balance approved by Congress. See Grable & Sons Metal Prods., Inc. v. Darue Eng’g & Mfg., 545 U.S. 308, 314 (2005) (explaining that the “the question is, does a state-law claim necessarily raise a stated federal issue, actually disputed and substantial, which a federal forum may entertain without disturbing any congressionally approved balance of federal and state judicial responsibilities.”). Grable does not provide a per se “test” for federal question jurisdiction. However, the presence of all four Grable factors suggests that federal jurisdiction is proper because there is a “serious federal interest in claiming the advantages thought to be inherent in a federal forum,” which can be vindicated without disrupting Congress’s intended division of labor between state and federal courts. Id. at 313 (citations omitted).

1 IV. DISCUSSION

2 a. Initial Grounds for Removal

3 In its Petition for Removal, Fannie Mae asserted as the grounds for removal the Ninth 4 Circuit’s decision in Lightfoot v. Cendant Mortg. Corp., 769 F.3d 681 (2014). In that case, the 5 Ninth Circuit held that the “sue-and-be-sued” clause of 12 U.S.C. § 1723a(a) (“the Fannie Mae 6 charter”) grants federal courts jurisdiction over cases in which Fannie Mae is a party. Lightfoot, 7 769 F.3d at 683. The statute specifically allows Fannie Mae to “in its corporate name, to sue and 8 to be sued, and to complain and to defend, in any court of competent jurisdiction, State or Federal 9 ” 12 U.S.C. § 1723a(a).

10 In the Motion to Remand, Hollyvale argues that this Court no longer has subject matter 11 jurisdiction, as the Supreme Court reversed the Ninth Circuit’s 2014 decision. Lightfoot v. Cendant 12 Mortg. Corp., 137 S. Ct. 553 (2017). The Supreme Court focused on the “court of competent 13 jurisdiction” phrase in the Fannie Mae charter, finding that the phrase requires a court to have 14 subject-matter jurisdiction over the claims before it separately from the invocation of the charter.
15 137 S. Ct. at 560-61. The Court held that “Fannie Mae’s sue-and-be-sued clause is most naturally 16 read not to grant federal courts subject-matter jurisdiction over all cases involving Fannie Mae. In 17 authorizing Fannie Mae to sue and be sued ‘in any court of competent jurisdiction, State or 18 Federal,’ [the clause] permits suit in any state or federal court already endowed with subject-matter 19 jurisdiction over the suit.” Id. at 561. Hollyvale additionally argues that on the face of the 20 Complaint it did not seek to avoid declaratory relief under a federal question, but rather brought a 21 claim for quiet title that turns exclusively on a Nevada statute. In opposition, Fannie Mae contends 22 that Plaintiff did assert a claim for declaratory judgment, which avoided an affirmative action by 23 the declaratory judgment defendant. Fannie Mae argues that it could have asserted claims for 24 injunctive relief, declaratory relief, or quiet title, and that it did raise such counterclaims. These 25 counterclaims, according to Fannie Mae, necessarily present claims arising under federal law – 26 namely, federal due process and the Federal Foreclosure Bar, 12 U.S.C. § 4617(j)(3).

27 Thus, the Court must resolve two questions: first, whether Fannie Mae can now rely upon 28 an alternative ground for subject-matter jurisdiction, and second, whether such ground did exist at

1 the time of removal. The Court finds that both questions are answered in the affirmative and that 2 subject-matter jurisdiction existed at the time of removal. The Court explains its reasoning below.

3 b. Coercive Action Doctrine Applies

4 Hollyvale argues that there is no substantial federal question found on the face of the 5 complaint or in its claims, and that Fannie Mae improperly attempts to rely upon a federal defense 6 – the Federal Foreclosure Bar – to now revive federal question jurisdiction. Hollyvale asks the 7 Court to find that each of its causes of action arise exclusively under state law.

8 Fannie Mae argues, and this Court agrees, however, that the “coercive action” doctrine 9 provides a basis for jurisdiction in this case. As the Supreme Court recently explained in 10 Medtronic, the coercive action doctrine provides a defendant in a declaratory judgment action a 11 limited avenue to bring suit in federal court, even if the initial claim for declaratory relief is not 12 based upon federal law. Medtronic, Inc. v. Mirowski Family Ventures, 134 S. Ct. 843, 848 (2014)
13 (citations omitted) (“We also agree that federal courts, when determining declaratory judgment 14 jurisdiction, often look to the ‘character of the threatened action.’ That is to say, they ask whether 15 ‘a coercive action’ brought by ‘the declaratory judgment defendant’ . . . ‘would necessarily present 16 a federal question.’”); see also Janakes v. United States Postal Serv., 768 F.2d 1091, 1093 (9th Cir.
17 1985) (citation omitted) (“If, however, the declaratory judgment defendant could have brought a 18 coercive action in federal court to enforce its rights, then we have jurisdiction notwithstanding the 19 declaratory judgment plaintiff’s assertion of a federal defense.”).

20 The Ninth Circuit in Janakes specified that the coercive action must “arise under” federal 21 law, and cannot be based solely upon “diversity of citizenship or another, non[-]substantive 22 jurisdictional statute.” Id. (citation omitted). Such suit need not have actually been brought by the 23 declaratory judgment defendant; federal question jurisdiction attaches even if the coercive action 24 is hypothetical. Id. at 1094. Moreover, jurisdiction will exist even if the claim serving as the basis 25 for jurisdiction is later abandoned or dismissed. See id. at 1095 (citations omitted) (finding that, 26 when defendant abandoned its statutory claims and pursued only federal common-law claims, 27 “waiver of [defendant’s] statutory claim, however, [did] not affect [the court’s] jurisdictional 28

1 analysis because the parties cannot by stipulation or waiver grant or deny federal subject matter 2 jurisdiction.”)

3 Hollyvale argues that the coercive action doctrine does not apply here because Hollyvale’s 4 claims to quiet title are based solely on state law, and Fannie Mae merely asserts a federal defense.
5 Fannie Mae argues, however, that the “coercive action” doctrine is applicable because Fannie Mae 6 could have, and now has, brought a separate federal declaratory judgment action under 28 U.S.C.
7 §2201 seeking quiet title or similar equitable claim based on the Federal Foreclosure Bar to protect 8 its property interests. The Court finds that, given the alleged facts in this case, a declaratory 9 judgment action seeking quiet title based upon an assertion of the Federal Foreclosure Bar is a 10 coercive action creating federal jurisdiction for this case.¹ The Court finds that the assertion of the 11 Federal Foreclosure Bar in this case is not simply an affirmative defense for which there would be 12 no federal jurisdiction. That is because the determination of whether or not the Federal Foreclosure 13 Bar applies is essential for deciding the quiet title or equitable claims regarding property interests
14 brought by Hollyvale and by Fannie Mae. The issue of the Federal Foreclosure Bar pre-empting 15 the application of state law is one suitable for a federal court to decide, and moreover has recently 16 been decided by the Ninth Circuit, as discussed below. Here, the Federal Foreclosure Bar requires 17 the consent of Fannie Mae’s conservator prior to the levy, attachment, garnishment, foreclosure, 18 or sale of the conservator’s property. 12 U.S.C. § 4617(j)(3). Implicit in this statute is Fannie Mae’s 19 right to challenge an unauthorized foreclosure before a federal court.

20 This finding is compelled by the Supreme Court’s decision in Grable & Sons Metal 21 Products v. Darue Engineering and Manufacturing. 545 U.S. 308 (2005). As the Supreme Court 22 explained and held in Grable, state law claims for quiet title have long provided bases for federal 23 court jurisdiction. 545 U.S. at 315 (finding that “quiet title actions hav[e] been the subject of some 24 of the earliest exercises of federal-question jurisdiction over state-law claims” and discussing three 25 cases in which quiet title claims arose under federal law). Several pre-Grable cases suggest that, 26 where a plaintiff’s allegations in an action to quiet title necessarily implicate federal law, federal

27
28 ¹ The Court declines to find that Fannie Mae could prevent remand by asserting a coercive action based upon the Fifth or Fourteenth Amendments.

1 jurisdiction is proper. See Wilson Cypress Co. v. Del Pozo Y Marcos, 236 U.S. 635, 643-644 2 (1915) (denying motion to dismiss in a quiet title case where the complaint involved a grant of 3 land made pursuant to treaty and finding that “there [was] scarcely a contention of complainants 4 which [did] not primarily or ultimately depend upon the laws of the United States.”); see also 5 Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U.S. 526, 528 (1903) (finding that federal jurisdiction was 6 proper both on grounds of diversity and because “it appear[ed] that [plaintiff’s] title rest[ed] upon 7 a proper interpretation of the land grant act of 1864 . . . [which provided] another ground wholly 8 independent of citizenship[.]”).

9 Whether the Federal Foreclosure Bar would have prevented, or as a matter of law did 10 prevent, Hollyvale’s purchase of the subject property in the nonjudicial foreclosure sale is an 11 essential consideration for its claim, regardless of whether the claim itself explicitly refers to 12 federal law. The Court finds the precedent in Grable to be both persuasive and binding here as to 13 the determination of federal question jurisdiction, and proceeds to analyze each factor of the test.

14 i. Quiet Title Claims Necessarily Raised a Federal Issue

15 The Court finds, as explained above, that there is a coercive action based upon substantive 16 federal law that Fannie Mae could have raised – that the sale of the subject property to Hollyvale 17 violated 12 U.S.C. 4617(j)(3) and that Fannie Mae thus retained its property rights. The first 18 element of Grable is therefore satisfied. The Court further finds pursuant to Janakes that it was 19 not necessary for Fannie Mae to raise this argument at the time of removal for the Court to 20 determine its jurisdiction. 768 F.2d at 1095.

21 ii. An Actual Dispute Existed at the Time of Removal

22 In applying Grable, the Court must also determine whether the claims in this case raise a 23 federal issue that is actually in dispute. A finding of federal question jurisdiction in a complaint 24 asserting exclusively state law claims requires a “contested federal issue[.]” Grable, 545 U.S. at 25 313 (2005) (citations omitted). An unresolved question is a crucial ingredient in such case, 26 particularly when a land interest is involved. See Shulthis v. McDougal, 225 U.S. 561, 569 (1912)
27 (“A suit to enforce a right which takes its origin in the laws of the United States is not necessarily, 28 or for that reason alone, one arising under those laws, for a suit does not so arise unless it really

1 and substantially involves a dispute or controversy respecting the validity, construction or effect
2 of such a law, upon the determination of which the result depends. This is especially so of a suit
3 involving rights to land acquired under a law of the United States.”)

4 The instant case was filed in November 2016 and removed to this Court in December 2016.
5 (ECF No. 1). At that time, there had not been a ruling on whether the Federal Foreclosure Bar
6 preempted the Nevada “superpriority lien” statute; therefore, an actual dispute existed at the time 7 of removal. On August 25, 2017, the Ninth Circuit decided Berezovsky v. Moniz, 869 F.3d 923.
8 In a case with very similar facts, the Court affirmed the district court’s finding that the Federal 9 Foreclosure Bar preempts a Nevada statute which allows homeowners associations to foreclose on 10 indebted properties and effect a “superpriority lien” over senior interests. Id. at 926. The Court 11 issued its decision to address an ongoing controversy, noting that a “clash of state and federal law 12 has spawned considerable litigation in Nevada” on this topic. Id. at 925. This Court finds, however, 13 that at the time this case was removed in 2016, there existed a question as to whether the Federal 14 Foreclosure Bar preempted Nevada law as the Ninth Circuit’s decision in Berezovsky had not been 15 issued. As the dispute also existed at the time the Supreme Court reversed Lightfoot, the Court 16 finds that the second element of Grable is satisfied.

17 iii. Resolution of the Issue is Substantially Important to the Federal System

18 The Court also finds that Hollyvale’s Amended Complaint necessarily raises a federal issue 19 that is also substantial. “The substantiality inquiry under Grable looks . . . to the importance of the 20 issue to the federal system as a whole.” Gunn v. Minton, 133 S. Ct. 1059, 1066 (2013). “[P]ure 21 issue[s] of law” are more likely to be substantial because a federal court may settle the issue “once 22 and for all.” Empire Healthchoice Assurance, Inc., v. McVeigh, 547 U.S. 677, 700 (2006) (citation 23 and quotation marks omitted). Conversely, “fact-bound and situation specific” inquiries are 24 generally not considered to be substantial. Id. at 700-01.

25 The Ninth Circuit’s decision in Berezovsky demonstrates the significance of the issue, 26 particularly as the dispute generated much litigation in Nevada. The Court rested its decision on 27 principles of federalism. Relying upon cases interpreting the Supremacy Clause, the Court 28 determined that the Federal Foreclosure Bar operated as an absolute prohibition on foreclosures of 1 property owned by FHFA and Fannie Mae, despite the existence of Nevada’s “superpriority lien” 2 statutory scheme. 869 F.3d at 931. The federal interest in preventing foreclosure on federal 3 property pursuant to a state law is significant and clear. Moreover, the resolution of the dispute by 4 the court in Berezovsky did not require fact-specific inquires, and conclusively settled the issue.

5 Thus, the Court finds that the third Grable element is met.

6 iv. Federal Court Resolution Has Not Disrupted the Federal – State 7 Balance

8 The resolution of the dispute regarding the Federal Foreclosure Bar’s effect on Nevada’s 9 “superpriority lien” statutory framework would not disrupt the federal versus state law balance.
10 As, the Ninth Circuit, in Berezovsky, stated explicitly: “Nevada’s [“superpriority lien”] law is an 11 obstacle to Congress’s clear and manifest goal of protecting [the conservator’s] assets in the face 12 of multiple potential threats, including threats arising from state foreclosure law.” Id. Resolution 13 from the federal court has thus provided harmony rather than discord and has established a clear 14 answer for the many litigants bringing challenges on similar sets of facts. The Court finds that, at 15 the time of removal in this case, the resolution of the dispute as to the Federal Foreclosure Bar 16 would not have upset the federal – state balance. Indeed, the resolution of the dispute would and 17 did, in Berezovsky, bring closure to an existing tension between federal and state law. The fourth 18 Grable factor is thus also satisfied.

19 As all four elements of the Grable framework are satisfied, the Court properly retains 20 jurisdiction over this case.

21 c. Fannie Mae’s Remaining Arguments

22 As the Court finds that the coercive action doctrine applies and the Grable framework is 23 established, the Court only briefly addresses Fannie Mae’s remaining arguments. Pursuant to 24 Janakes, a coercive action cannot be asserted on non-substantive grounds such as diversity. The 25 Court therefore declines to address Fannie Mae’s contention of fraudulent joinder. The Court also 26 notes that it does not find Fannie Mae’s arguments persuasive on the issue of consent to 27 jurisdiction, as the Court retains the obligation to sua sponte ensure it has jurisdiction at all times 28 during the pendency of litigation. See McNutt v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp. of Ind., 298 U.S.

1 178, 189 (1936) (“The authority . . . vest[ed] in the court to enforce the limitations of its jurisdiction
2 precludes the idea that jurisdiction may be maintained by mere averment or that the party asserting 3 jurisdiction may be relieved of his burden by any formal procedure. If his allegations of 4 jurisdictional facts are challenged by his adversary in any appropriate manner, he must support 5 them by competent proof. And where they are not so challenged the court may still insist that the 6 jurisdictional facts be established or the case be dismissed”)

8 V. CONCLUSION

9 For the reasons stated above,

10 IT IS ORDERED that Plaintiff / Counterdefendant’s Motion to Remand (ECF No. 39) is
